

Facing the World for 23 years

Cohen clan's event raises another million and change for 60 social-service organizations

MALCOLM PARRY

VANCOUVER SUN

FRESH FACES: Sunshine prevailed again when the 23rd annual Face The World Foundation gala that Jacqui Cohen founded raised another million and change for 60 social-service organizations. It was held at the Cohen clan's original University District home, with one auction item a role in attendee Jackie Collins' next novel. Reflecting some of the sizzle-scribe's past characters, Cohen credited her born-again appearance to a continuing personal relationship with the younger Rob Menard.

Youthful faces joined those of original gala-goers. Notable were Jeevan Doman and Natasha Sangra, both 20. Cohen's daughter, Kasondra Cohen-Herrendorf, who heads her own Face of Today Foundation, accompanied that charity's VP, J. J. Wilson. He's creative director of the menswear division at a firm papa Chip founded: Lululemon Athletica.

Rob Menard accompanied Jacqui Cohen when her 23rd-annual Face The World Foundation gala reportedly raised another $1 million.

Natasha Sangra and Jeevan Doman, both 20, joined some who had attended Face The World galas before they were born.

Face of Today charity founder Kasondra Cohen-Herrendorf and Lululemon Athletica scion J.J. Wilson attended the Face The World gala.